Screening and Epidemiology - AAIM

SCREENING AND EPIDEMIOLOGY Morton K.

Schwartz, PhD DR. SCHWARTZ: Thank you very much.

From our point of view, screening is the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. If we can find tests that will help in the early detection of cancer, we can fulfill our intuitive feelings that early detection leads to early treatment, which in turn leads to cure. Certainly we know that early Modern medicine emphasises self directed learning and critical evaluation, say Chris McManus and colleagues in their article on UK medical students and, one way and another, there's a lot about learning, and the pitfalls to its progress, in this week's BMJ. There's long been debate about whether the extra year that many British
